

GOOD MORNING FLYNN FLYERS! TODAY IS Tuesday MAY THE 5TH AND HERE ARE YOUR ANNOUNCEMENTS

Today is also Cinco de Mayo! Today is the day in Mexico's history when in 1862 their army defeated the French Empire at Puebla. Although many believe that this day is Mexico's Independence Day it is not. It is a holiday that has been slightly "Americanized" and gained more popularity in the US than in Mexico! Nevertheless, it is an excellent day to celebrate and enjoy any Mexico culture (including food) that you desire! At my house, we will be making Chimichangas as they are a family favorite! We may also stop and pick up some fun chips and cheese or salsa from one of the local restaurants.

Well, it wasn't Saturday weather wise, but the sun was nice and warm for most of the day yesterday and we were to get our temperatures in the low 60's! I hope with less wind and more sun, you were able to get out a little and enjoy! However, watch out! I am seeing lots of frost warnings starting tomorrow and through the weekend! I actually saw that the low temperatures this week may dip into the 20's so cover your plants! Today we should see the low 60's again so be sure to get out and enjoy!

Your trivia question for this week brings us back to Wisconsin and much closer to home. Your question:

What is the deepest lake in Wisconsin? Your answer cannot be one of the Great Lakes that borders our state either! Have fun doing your research on this lake and feel free to share your answer to the question and any other fun facts that you learn about this lake!

So far I have had multiple answers shared with me! Based on the research that I have done, the deepest in-land lake is not too far away from EC. A hint that I can share with you today is this is a manmade lake that use to be a quarry! It was mined for taconite (which is used to make Iron)! Keep those answers rolling in!

Students, don't forget that you have a Flynn homework hotline on Tuesdays and Thursdays with Mrs. Wendtland and Mrs. Hebert! If you have any questions about your math, reading, writing or word work, do not forget that they are an excellent resource along with your teacher!

So those are your announcements for this Tuesday, have a great day Flynn Flyers!
